THE CARRIERS of the SATURDAT EVENIER POST he commencement of the year 1823. PIME, the dread Traveller, whose way nows not obstruction, -whose career Naught but the UNOREATE can stay. Hath, to Eternity's wide scroll, The nameless record of the soul, Added, with tireless hand, a Year. PATRONS! 'tis ours with artless song To greet ye-and the hope we frame, That peace her visits may prolong To you, boasts but the simple name Of GRATITUDE -this shall be yours While feeling, or while Truth endures. We envy not the sparks that gleam Within the heart, to virtue dead, Where Gratitude, angelic theme! Her oil of kindness never shed. Colder that breast than Zembla's snow, Where naught but selfishness can glow. We haste, exultingly, to share The willing smile our toil bath won, This to deserve hath been our aim; Bestow it, and the boon we'll wear Upon our hearts, our guide, our sun,-Obtain'd, we ask no other fame. For you-hath labour lent her hours, And diligence bestowed its prime; From sea and land, from ev'ry coast Intelligence with all her powers Hath cull'd her sweets-and every clime Hath yielded tribute for our Post. The wrongs of nations, and the deed Of cruelty, our page have dy'd; Nor have we shunn'd, with honest zeal And crime-detesting warmth, to speak Of those who bade the guiltless bleed, And roll'd the desolating tide O'er fertile plains, and sheath'd their steel

Within the bosom of the Greek. And, passing moments to amuse, The din of conflict was the theme, Not, gentle Patrons! that we choose To stain our sheet with glory's dream, Were choice our own, O surely naught But soothing sounds should meet the ears Since Cumming with M'Duffie fought Our page must be the chronicler. To talk of Cologne water sure Was naughty, and the silken vest To barricade the hero's breast, Indeed, indeed, sirs! was a ture Of wicked wags-for we've no doubt They, too, were brave, or such a rout Would not have serv'd the summer long To feast the wits, or aid our song. Old England-scat of base intrigue Of beggary and royal pride, Has been our theme—the Holy League, And Londonderry's suicide,— But chief of all—the visit royal th that good monarch, the 4th George, (Who landed from a silk barge.) To his true Scottish subjects loyal,-What glorious times when Edinboro' Rush'd forth to bid the king good morrow! Walter,-we mean Sir Walter came, Sir Walter in the peerless name, Of many a lady, aye of note, And with a speech well coun'd by rote, Gave a rich Cross of silver ore, To him who ne'er had cross before. DEAR NATIVE LAND! still dost thou cla The heart's warm impulse ever true-First born of Freedom! heir of fame, Our fondest wishes rise for you. But whence the gloom that shrouds thy shore Why droop thy beauteous laurels so?

Thy name shall blot the scroll of Time. See Vengeance rising from her throne, Arm'd with the trophies of the temb,-That mercy thou hast never known Shall not avert thy righteous doom.

PATRO !- our gratulations still Attend you through time's brief career,-

Tis ALLEN well'ring in his gore,

Island of blood! thy bounding waves

Are deeply stain'd with loathing crime,-

FOR THE SATURDAT EVENING POST. TO MY BIRTH-DAY.

Once more the anxious day arrives, That gave my body birth. The day that from the earth Rais'd up the feeble form that lives. The thought transports my inmost soul;

Let mirth and joy combin'd, Enrapture att my mind, And every care in slumbers tull.

But though hilarity abound, My anxious thoughts increase To interrupt my peace, To interrupt my peace, And all my soul with awe confound, How many fleeting years have roll'd

Bafore my thoughtless eyes, Fast as an arrow flies, Or like a trifling tale that's told. My early days, time that I lov'd

Are gone and all pass'd o'er, Returning never more, And though not lost, yet unimprov'd. Let this reflection make me strive, And use my utmost pow'rs, To catch the fleeting hours, as future birsh days shall arrive.

HOME.
Home! 'tis the name of all that sweetens life, it speaks the warm affections of a wife: The lisping babe that prattles on the knee, in all the playful grace of infancy: The spot where found parental love may trace. The glowing virtues of an infant race: Oh! 'tis a word of more than magic apell, Whose sacred power the wanderer best can tell. He who long distant from his native land, Feels at the name of home his soul expand: Whether as patrich, husband, father, friend, To that dear point his wishes bend: And still he owns. where'er his footsteps roam, Life's choicest blessings centre all ar more.

FOR THE SATURBAY EVENING POST.

"Hard hearted avarice guards with bolted door, his useless treasures from the starving poor; Loads the lone hours with misery and care, And lives a beggar to enrich his heir."

Avarice is a vice of very extensive influence mong men, and it has often called forth severe res from the pens of moralists and writers who have laboured to correct the follies of man kind. St. Paul declared, " money is the root of all evil."—The man who loves money merely for its own sake, without regard to the good purposes of life it is designed to serve, is a miser; and this depravity of heart seems in many instances, to show itself in very early life, and leads to the commission of crimes, so numerous, that no wonder it should be stigmatized as the most prolific source of evil. It produces an uncharitable, an unnatural temper towards our fellow creatures-it blunts all the finer feelings of the soulit hardens the heart against the sufferings of hu manity, and shuts the ear to the cries of distress,-These, are comparatively mild, but detestable ef fects of an avaricious spirit which becomes most execrable when it breaks forth against the public weal, whets the assassin's knife, and immolate its victim on the blood-stained altar of its own ra-

"When avarice enslaves the mind
"And selfish views alone bears sway,
"Man turns a savage to his kind,
"And blood and rapine mark his way."

Melancholy, indeed, would be the picture of only half the enormities committed for the sake of mo ney-and if we may judge mankind by their acuniversal predominant passion-shewing itself in youthful life, increasing with the increase of years, and flourishing more than any other corrupt propensity amid the decays of old age. - What a won derful spectacle to view the battered body, totter ing under the infirmities of years, no longer able to enjoy the pleasures fitted for it, seeking enjoy ment amid heaps of accumulated wealth, and de luded by its deceitful splendour, is ready to exclaim ' Money thou art my God.'-But what must be the inward condition of the sout of the covetous and the rich-he is continually upon the rack -suffers perpetual anxiety and apprehension for the safety of his treasure-a trifling loss frets his spirit, and if disappointment attends any of his chemes of adding to his possessions, he "turns away his face and will eat no bread."

" Delinded man, self-ernel and perverse of heart, Risks for vain toys the jewel of his soul." R.

The Emigrant: OR, THE BIRD OF PARADISE.

TRANSLATED FROM THE GERMAN.

In the demolition of old buildings, many an ho nest creature is driven from its resting place.— Trus it happened in the destruction of the an-cient French monarchy. Noblemen of the different orders, emigrated in bands from their native coun try. Many took up arms to recover their lost rights; many went, as the 'prentice boys express themselves to fight. A hero of this description passed through Bavaria, begging from de ed by the hand of time, that it was similar in ap pearance to a sieve; yet some traces of its former grandeur, and the cross of the order of Louis fixed to the buttonhole, was still visible. He entered a village, which had been nearly deprived of all its inabitant in order to fill the cross. Plands the inhabitants, in order to fill the army. Elspeth, the wife of the magistrate, sat alone before the house door; her imagination was roaming in the fields of Elvsium, employed with the aprit of her first himband, who had died about twelve months prevently, and whom, to the great vexation of her second mate, she could never forget. Otherwise, reader mark well, she was a little aimpie and a little deaf. The emigrant opened his extition with httle deaf The emigrant opened his petition with her in broken German. Elspeth inquired meekly, from what country, friend? The Knight answer-ed, from Paris? * Exclaimed the simple, hard

From Paradise?" exclaimed the simple, hard hearing rustic, staring him in the face. "From Paradise?" repeated she, astonished.
"Direct from there, replied the Frenchman; who immediately resolved to apply this strange mistake either to his diversion, or, if he could, to his advantage.

'From Paradise?' she asked the third time, her hands clasped over her head in astonishment. 'In my whole life I never saw any person that came from that place.'

"Very probable. There are daily new things oc-curring under the sun." Then you are really from the piace where the good live after their death?" Certandy yes!" Why then you must know my dear, blessed nushand. "Without doubt. What is his name?" Martin." Martin—Martin—there is his name? "Martin." Martin—Martin—there are many Martins there; I know a tall. a thick—"The thick! the thick!" "The thick Martin? The hooest fellow! Oh! he is my most intimate friend? "Ia'nt it so, an't he a right good soul! Well how does he do? "Sometimes not for the best." "Oh, ave Maria, what alls him?" He is hearty as a much but here often outhing whatever to get! reach, but has often nothing whatever to eat."

'The poor man!' His dress is likewise very shab-by, and he is a real Sansculotte." 'The unfortuby, and he is a real Sansculotte." "The unfortu-nate fellow! I any person only could help him!" "That you can do easily yourself." Were it only possible. Dear sir, or angel—I don't rightly know how I shali cail you—only tell me how. "Through me. True, I was never accustomed to carry mos-sages, but always kept people enough about me, who did every thing I required; yet in friendship for your husband, if you wish to send him a bun-

Oh, you unheard of simpleton! he angrily ex-claimed, 'you have suffered yourself to be finely overreached. This may have been, for sught I know, a fine bird of Paradise. Which way went know, a fine bird of Paradise. Which way went the cheat?

Elspeth pointed out the direction, and the magiatrate ordered his servant immediately to saddle the horse; which having seen performed, he immediately mounted and put him to his speed. The Knight in the mean time, had not travelled a small's pace; he had already resolted a small forest, some distance off when he heard the sound of a horse in full gallop approaching him. 'Ha!' thought he, without doubt a person in pursuit of me.' He hastily hid his bundle in a thicket, then like an unsuspecting traveller, went showly a few steps farther on, and that he might not be too far from his booty he seated himself on a stone at the way side. A turn in the road prevented the magistrate from witnessing this transaction; and in spite of his imagined wisdom he had entirely forgotten to ask a description of the Bird of Paradise; he therefore thought—shall I suspect this pilgrim who seems so innocent, and withal has no bundle !—No, this would be unjust. In consequence of this, he role up and inquired 'whether he had not seen a gord-for-nothing scoundred pass by with a bundle !' 'Yes, indeed,' said the Frenchman, 'this moment a nimble fellow, with a bundle under his arm, leaped over the fence and forced himself into the thickets. I had my own thoughts of him. I thought perlaps he might be a thief.' 'To be sure it is leaped over the fence and forced himself into the thickets. I had my own thoughts of him. I thought perhaps he might be a thief." 'To be sure it is such a d—n'd dog!' exclaimed Casper; 'i' I catch him, I will beat him soundly. I am only at a loss where to leave my horse, as I can't ride over tences, thorns and hedges.' 'No no, that womt do,' cried the sharper; 'stay, I'll assist you, and hold him until you return; but then you must give me a few coppers.' 'That I will,' said the magistrate, and sprung from his horse, gave the bridle to the emigrant, and run full speed into the forest. The knight of the runful countenance had no sooner lost sight of the imprudent man, than, rejoicing that he had so easily likewise obtained a horse, saddle and bridle, mounted the steed and was off quick as lightning.

Casper searched the forest until his garments were almost torn to pieces. Tired of the fruitless chase, he returned, and was murmuring that not withstanding the loss he had already sustained, he must yet reward the person holding his horse.—With these thoughts he arrived at the place whence he had departed from two hours before, and was much surprised to see neither man nor horse. 'What is the meaning of this?' With these words he stretched his neck, stood upon his tipoes and cried out, 'tidalo?' where are you with the and cried out, 'Hallo?' where are you with the horse?' Receiving no answer, he became enraged, stamped on the ground, and finally climbed up a tree, where he could see several miles around him, but beheld no horse.

"And then with dreadful rage he cries, Villain he is, I see full well; On thou curs'd bird of Paradise, That thou might'st end thy ride in hell." With more wishes of the same kind, he descended from the true, and fatigued cast himself on the earth, and uttered the following soliloquy: "No man can be wise at all times. Yes, if a person has been wise for fifty years, still at last a faolish morgent will overtake him. Oh! Casper, Casper, you pursued a rogue and suffered him to overreach you. This is, with respect be it said, a touch of a fool's wisdom. How I lost my horse, I dare not even tell my wife, whom I am always upbraiding with her ignorance, lest she laugh at me in her with her ignorance, lest she laugh at me in her sleeve, and forever afterwards hold up my wisdom in disrespect. Hem! how shall I quick deceive her?' He considered a moment, then sprung up, exclaimed, 'that will do,' and hastened home. Elspeth, his spouse, stood at the door. He went up to her in a friendly manner, and said.

went up to her in a friendly manner, and said.— This time I ask your pardon. You have trusted your presents for the blessed Martin to a safe hand. The honeat fellow that troubles himself with it. really resides in Paradise, and showed me his ge-nuine passport, signed by the holy Saint Pater. — 'Oh, then there is another load from my mind,' answered she, 'but why do you return on foot!'

'Is it possible you are so simple that you cannot guess the reason!' said Casper; 'why then I will tell you.''—The good, obliging fellow fatigued and wearied himself so much with your heavy bundle, that I pitied him; and that he might be able to prosecute his journes with greater case and facility. prosecute his journey with greater case and facil-ity, I made him a present of the horse.'

FOR THE SATURDAY EVENING POST.

Time, and the improvements of science, have introduced such changes and alterations into the English language that it now requires considerable application and labor to decipher the text of some antique works, printed two or three centuries ago-even the orthography of ancient times is calculated to puzzle the brains of some readers. Words, which doubtless had a specific and plain meaning in former days, have now become obsolete, or convey a meaning quite different. Thus, St. Paul, in some very old his wrinkles on her face-the lustre of her eye has English translations of the New Testament, departed and she now feels herself neglected and is made to style himself in his epistles, " a miserable. villain of Jesus Christ," "a knave of Jesus Christ"-these would be very absurd terms to call the holy Apostle in our day. There is no doubt but that many obscurities of the sacred text owe their origin to this change in our language. The pages of Shakspeare on that account perhaps it may not be amins to learn some before we go. My Uncle is good at writing and giving advice, and from him I receive the learned, are indispensably requisite to unravel his meaning. In an old work, supin our language. The pages of Shakspeare unravel his meaning. In an old work, supposed to have been printed some centuries ago, there are some verses addressed to a dle of clothes and some money. I will take it for him.' 'Oh, that I will do from the bottom of my soul? Then you are returning again to Paradine!' Certainly. In three days I shall be there again.' Elepeth immediately went to work, and gathered the holiday suits of her former husband, filled a purse with ducats, and gave all to the Emigrant, with these words, 'Carry the whole bundle to Martin to ameliorate his sai condition, and salute him a thousand times for me' 'Good, 'was the reply, 'it shall certainly be delivered; but you must give me some money for measureger's less, and likewise some to pay toll at the gate of the holy. St. Peter.' Having obtained what he demanded he departed.

Shortly afterwards, Casper, the magistrate, returned from the fields, and his spouse related the occurrence to him.

IDLE HOURS_No. 6.

It was now that season of the year when spring, released from the prison-house of nature, trails her beauties over hill and vailey, and re-animates the torpid inscess of summer. The groves put forth their little leaves to the sun, white flowers were springing up in the meadows, the labourers' axe was heard in the distant woodlands, and the wasps hummed along the sunny wall of the cottage. Louisa looked with a melancholy eye over the scene which a year ago she regarded with delight. She appeared as if awakened from a dream, the magic fonders of which had fled forever. But as the reader is, perhaps, desirous to know something of the parent of Louisa, and is no doubt, even now, wondering what the old grutleman could think of the affair-for it was beginning to make a presty loud noise in the neighood; and it very often happens, especially in small towns, that every one knows much more about the affairs of his neighbour than about his own, particularly in matters of love. And so in this case. Matrons shrugged their shoulders as they looked upon their daughters; the Maids screwed up their mouths and looked shily at each otherwhile the young lads and modest lusses of the village, who, of course, must have something to talk about, laid fast hold of this as a subject of universal interest. But, pardon me, this is a digression. Her father, I was going to say, was one of those active men we often meet with, who are eternally busy about they know not what cared little about the affairs of others, and knew less about his own Ween the weather would permit he was commonly seen sitting in his parch, with a book lying at his side, though he read little else than the almanae, and has often been heard to say, " if he could only live comfortably it was all he desired." Her mother had been a woman of a very different disposition. Always careful of whatever concerned the welfare of her family, she had spared no pains in imparting the useful admonitions of her experience, and had she lived Louisa would certainly have been a different girl. But the uncertainty of life often leaves us destitute of friends when most we need them, and Louisa often reflected upon the adieu given by her mother, and could now regret the deprivation of her guardian fondness.

Days, weeks, and months passed away, Louisa heard nothing to induce her to hope, and she resolved when Alfred returned to bring about a reconciliation with him. Her former regard for him now returned. She went no where but she beheld something to call to mind their carly happiness. Every flower that sprung up in her garden recalled him to her recollection, and when seated in the green arbour where oft they had sat together, she now could only feel lonely and sad. In her reflecting moments are often fancied she saw him far at sen, standing pensively upon deck with his face turned towards home, while the ship dashed proudly onward through the curling waves of the ocean.

Alfred's success in trade was beyond his most sanguine expectations, and the next season he returned with a large fortune. The knowledge he had acquired by travelling added greatly to his improvement, so that he was considered not only the richest but the most accomplished gentleman known at the village. Immediately after his arrival, he took a journey to the westward which gave Louisa no opportunity of accing or having any communication with him. He here met with a lady of distinguished merit, whom he soon after married. He returned, purchased an elegant si tuation at some distance from his native village, where he has ever since resided, and enjoyed all the happiness of connubial love. The father of Louisa died some years since; she now lives with a distant relative, scarcely known to any but the family where she resides. Age has began to draw

THON THE BICAMOND ENQUIRER

Obituary of an old Acquaintance .- Died on Tuesday night last, precisely at twelve o'clock, a lady who is known to us all, and has been our companion for the last twelve months. As was formerly said of another member of the same family, she is quietly buried in the family vault of eternity. Her offspring, all of whom were cut off at the same time, consisted $65 sons and daughters, called days and nights; 8760 grand children, married into the family of the ours; 525,000 great grand children, named minutes; and 31,536,000 great great grand children, of the pigmy race of the ands.

This good lady, who has seen so many if the sons and daughters of the earth sink into the bosom of their mother, now herself bears witness to the inconstancy of all things.- She has seen beauty cut off in its prime; genius suddenly snatched from the dmiring eye of men; she has seen Canova himself laid in his tomb-she has seen a prime minister of England become his awa assassin-she has seen some of our own bearest and tenderest ties rent asunder, private fortunes upturned, and public empires silently or openly yielding to the touch of Revolution. Though not a witness to as many important events as several of her predecessors, yet she too has witnessed many a struggle. She has seen the genius of liberty more firmly planting her fact on the shores of South Americashe has seen the empire of the Montezumas usurped by a pretended imitator of the virtues of Washington-she has beheld a constitutional government more permamently organized in Portugal and S the Greeks starting from the slumber of twelve hundred years, and almost vieing with the heroes of Mara: hon and Thermopyle-she has seen the dark conclave of legitimate princes hatching new schemes of asurpation within the halls of Veronathe world regarding them like the baleful comet "portending change;" and ruin to the rights of mankind. In these United States she has collected but little to enter into the tablets of history—our people at peace—our prosperity silently advancing and no important struggle exhibited: only the distant theories of a contest for the chief office of the government.

J. C. Calhoun, Secretary of War, under the command of siajor Sie present fit. Long, from the notes of Major Long, Mr. T. Say, and other continent of the explaining ranty; compiled by Edwin James, botanist and geologist to the expedition."

We understand the patronage of the war department has been extended to the gentlemen who have been meanly a year congaged in arranging and condensing these voluminous materials for the present of their islands as very replete with important information relating to the aboriginal infants.

fants, the geography, inheringly, audiogy, butany, climate, and natural resources of an extensive and heretofore almost inknown portion of our country. The work is comprised in two large octave volumes, accompanied with an atlas containing maps, geological sections and landscape views. The maps and sections appear to have been constructed by Major Long, and the landscape views are by Mr. Seymour, who was attached to the expedition as draftsman.

The matter connected with natural history and the manners and customs of the Indiana has been collected and arranged by Mr. Say and Dr. James assisted by Mr. T Peale. They have also had the benefit of the MSS of the late Dr. Baldwin, who was originally botanist to the expedition, and the MSS, of M. Jessup, who was attached to the exploring party as mineralogist until it arrived at Council Bluff.

Council Bluff.

On realing this valuable and scientific work, we have distinguished, among much highly interesting matter, as papers of superior merit, the treatise on Indian manners and customs by Arr. Say, and the geological report by Dr. James. The style of the work is throughout unaffected, perspicuous, and sometimes elegant: the subjects of incuous, and sométimes elegant: the subjects of in-quiry are numerous and the remarks are recorded in the form of a journal or disry, with manifest precision and veracity. For depth of research, scope of observation, and accuracy of scientific detail, the volumes before us may be compared with the splendid productions of the most distin-guished European travellers. To Major Long, assisted by Lieut. Graham and Cadet Swift, we are principally indebted for the astronomical and meteorological observations, as well as for the facts illustrative of the geography of the regions neteorological observations, as well as to the facts illustrative of the geography of the regions visited by the expedition. The narrative is given in the language of Dr. James, and is enriched by the contributions of several gentlemen of the party who have kept voluminous and minute jour nals.

Candour, accuracy, various knowledge, diligent observation, issatiable curiosity, and devotion to his pursuit, seem to have qualified the compiler for his ardunus and responsible undertaking.

The execution of the maps and other decorations is in a respectable style, and we judge the whole work to be the most satisfactory production of the kind hitherto presented to the American public.

An account is given in one of the latest London papers of the capture, by the Police, of a company of players, and their audience. It appears that complaints had re peatedly been made by the inhabitants in the Kent road, against certain scenes that were exhibited at an old floor cloth manufactory in Manning-place, which had been converted into a Temple for the Muses, which was nightly visited by the most aban doned of both sexes. Two pence was the price of admittance, but even a penny was not refused. The night of the capture, there was supposed to be 500 persons in the house. Jane Shore was the play, which was suddenly cut short by the Police Officers. The scene that followed beggsrs decription-and the whole was enlivened by the bawling of children, the screams of the women and the noise of the men. The wind having died away, the smoke, which had before been carried off in separate masses, now collect ed, and formed an immense column of more than a mile in height, resting on the summit of the mountain. This column, pend trated by the rays of the sun, which were differently refracted by its masses of une qual density, presented a most splendid spectacle. By degrees the cloud of volcanic matter obscured both the sun and Vesu vius itself. Night came on, and the beauty of the phenomenon exceeded all anticipation. Torrents of fire issued from the crater, descended through the column of dark clouds, swelled gradually in their progress, and exhibited the sublime view of a moun tain of fire beneath a heaven of smoke .-The concussions of the mountain followed in quick succession. Stupendous Fraud.—A nest of villainy has been discovered at Charleston, S. C. in which one of the city guard, named Fraser, was a principal agent. Four chests and one trunk, secreted in a bouse in Pinkney street, contained the spoil which he and his associates had collected, consisting of a whole world of rags and riches. These unfortunate articles knew not how they ame together, and were happy at a general gool delivery. At the voice of liberty, there sprang forth gold and siver watches, new and dirty stockings, tattered and elegant lines cambric handkerchiefs, pearl, gold and stone ornaments, earrings, old coats, breast pins and boots, silver spoons and suspenders, buttons, kniver, sheets, cotton balls, and silver ladles; silk handkerchiefs, and cups and saucers, ribbands, gloves, rings and cravats, breeches, panta-loons, and packages of new goods. In short, a stream of plunder had been for years silently accumulating in this honest guardman's chest, as into a reservoir; and it is believed the discovery would never have been made, but for the quantity be-coming so great as to burst the banks.—

HAVANA.—It is stated in a letter to the Editor the Charleston City Gazette, dated the 18th ult. of the Charleston City Gazette, dated the 18th ultithat the late insurrectionary movements at Harana, originated in a dislike of the lower classes of the natives to the European soldiers, half a dozen of whom they had assassinated within a few days. The writer speaks of the internal peace and transpality as very precarious; expresses a hope that the present constitution may experience no reverses in Spain, as it was tooked to as their "best hower anchor in a violent storm;" and concludes that the system of piracy, which the government of Cuba could not control, would be effectually suppressed by the United would be effectually suppressed by the United States. WILLIAM MILHOR to be an alderman for the city

FROM HARRISBURG.

An extract of a letter to the Editor of the! Phi ladelphia Gazette, dated January 8th, gives the following information:—" There is very little doing yet, in either branch of the Legislature. Much time is wasted, in discussing the claims of Old Soldiers—nay even old waggeners—to be placed on the pension list. A communication was lately received from the Governor, covering a letter from the Governor of New Jersey, accompanied by a preamble and resolutions of the Legislature of that State, and a memorial to the latter from the Managers of what has been called the Windmill Jeland Bridge Company, recommending that sub-ject to the Legislature. The memorial is very actfully drawn, and among other matters, repre-sents the opposition to the measure in the city of Philadelphia, as originating entirely in the selfishness of a few individuals—and amongst them the ferrymen.-The whole, in my opinion is a most impudent proceeding; and is, no doubt, the wor of a certain spirit, who is now very busy in Harris burg. I wish you would call the attention of our citizens to this subject. I am not one of those who apprehend any great danger to the western channel of the Delaware, from the erection of such a bridge as is contemplated; but while any doubt remains on the subject, such a project ought to be resisted; and it ought to be resisted also on the ground of the unhandsome means which have been resorted to, to force upon the people of Philadel-phia, a measure in which they are principally interested, against their strong and repeated resother letter dated the 6th inst. mentions the letter dated the 6th inst. mentions that the Committee appointed by the Senate on morial praying for a terration in the charter of t. Mary's Church, set in the afternoon of that day, in one of the arge Committee rooms, Wesses. Foran and Sullivan appeared before the committee on the part of the petitioners; and the Bev. Mr. Harold and Mr. Maitland on the part of those remenstrating against an alteration. The spectators were numerous. Mr. Fagan addressed the committee on behalf of the petitioners, and was replied to by Mr. Harold. Mr. Sallivan also addressed the committee, but an adjournment took place before he concluded his remarks.

Since the above was in type, we have learnt that the committee met again on the afternoon of the 8th inst. and that the result of their deliberations was likely to terminate in favour of the petitioners.

A motion was made by Gen. Wise, on the 8th Jan, in the house of representatives, to illuminate the house, in commensuration of the battle of Now-Orleans and negatived—only 21 voting in its lavour. Had this motion succeeded, it would have been published from one end of the continent to the other, as an expression of the sentiments of Pennsylvania in favour of Gen. Jackson as the next president.

X. Geological Sections.

The thesign of this work is, to give a compendyous view of the history of the expedition, and of such discoveries of the party as appeared in some degree fit to gratify public curiosity. The residence of several of the party during the winter of 1819, at Engineers Cantonment, about 700 miles from the mouth of the Miscouris, and in the heart of an Indian country, afforded the opportunity of collecting much new and important information concerning the Aborogines. The details of this occupy a large part of the first volume. After leaving the Missouriearly in the summer or 1820, the party traversed a great extent of one applyed country, grounders wide, sundy and grasse deserts of the Plattee, and arrived in July, as the Bocky Mountains, in longitude about 100 degrees W. from Greenwich. Near the Bocky Mountains they met several bands of Kaskains, Arrapahoes, Kiawas, and other creatic tribes, who be quent the country at the sources of the Platte, the Arkansa, the Rio del Norte, and the Red River of Natchitoches. In their progress totrards the south, they passed within 30 miles of Santa Fre is New-Vexico, and falling upon a branch of the Rio Moro of Humboldt, which they found to be the Canadian fork of the Arkansa, they resured to the east vlong its banks, and arrived at the in-in-ippin to coher. In preparing the work the compiler has had be access to the numerous jet mals and document of the party, and has received important assistance from Major Long and Wr. Soy. Jan 11—6t

THE RUSTIC RHYMIST.

Ben Jonson, while passing one day along Pleet-street near the Devil Tavern, observing the eyes of a bumpkin steadfastly fixed on the window of a grocer, gently tapped him on the shoulder, and inquired what so particularly attracted his attention; "Why, master," replied Ralph, "I be admiring that nice piece of poetry over the shop.". How can you make that rhyme ?" replied Ben-"the words are-Coffee and ten to es sold." "Thus," answered the rustic-

"Coffice and tea

The poet was so much pleased with the thought, that he took Ralph immediately into his service, in which he continued un til Jonson's death.

AUTHORITIES.

A LL Authorities prove that the teeth can be saved—but never unless mankind are informed,
in this city it has been said that public information from the pen of the Dentist is unfashionable—alas

the poor teeth,
All history proves that man will hesitate, but
All history proves known to refuse her gene. All history proves that man will hesitate, but that woman was never known to refuse her generous aid when the public welfare was in danger. Ye fair be cautious, keep this great truth in view, Public information is a friend to you.

Williams performs every operation which will save the teeth without giving pain, extracting a touth only excepted.

save the teeth without giving pain, extracting a touth only excepted. The teeth are destroyed by pressure—What man can give another cause? England gives none—and it said that our most eminent dentists approve the English writers on the teeth. The teeth require to be kept clean.

For one dollar Williams performs every operations requisite; and fixes teeth in the month on moderate terms. Office No. 161 Fine street, near 5th. oct. 19—16

NEW S: RIES.

In less than 60 days a 4th class of the popular and judicious new series lotteries will be determined in the assat time of 5 minutes !!! The unprecedented dispatch and punctuality of payment in those toteries daily increase the number of its admirers, while its acknowledged superiority in doing away entirely all that suspense and anxiety attending the drawing on the old plan, and in its infallibility to error, has as it was confidently anticipated, received the unanimous patronage of distant as well as local adventurers.

As the following scheme is formed on the combination of 33 Nos. packages of 11 embracing those numbers, have peen purchased of the manager, each package of which will be insured to draw $40 in prizes, thus securing to the purchaser nearly one half of his venture, and his 11 shares, for prizes of sterling magnitude. But to those who cannot well lay out so much cash for such a short period, another mode is afforded them of paying their addresses to the godde's precisely on an equality with the former method, as respects chances; that is, on their paying the difference between what a package must of necessity draw and the present price of one. The sums then to be advanced will be rence between what a package must of necessis draw and the present price of one. The sums the to be advanced will be-
